The Generosity Commission Launches!

We are thrilled to have publicly launched the Generosity Commission last month. With the public announcement and the first meeting of the Generosity Commission complete, we are ready to dig into the work ahead to celebrate and inspire generosity.

RESEARCH REPORT

Nonprofit Trends & Impacts 2021

The Generosity Commission will be informed by academic research along with community insights and feedback. The first study commissioned by the Generosity Commission was published last month.

The Nonprofit Trends and Impacts 2021 study was conducted by a group of researchers led by the Urban Institute. This report examines how giving to community-based and social service organizations across health, economic, social and civic disruptions of 2020.

An important aspect of this study is the creation of a baseline for future annual surveys that will build longitudinal and nationally representative data of nonprofit organizations. We are pleased to support this initial research, which is one piece of a partnership between several institutions to expand research and access to data on the nonprofit sector.

Here is the latest:

A new fact sheet published last week by the Urban Institute provides a look at key findings related to diversity and representation in the nonprofit sector.
